Cookies policy

What are cookies?

Cookies - small pieces of text information sent by a web server and stored on the user side (typically the hard disk). Default parameters allow cookies to read information contained therein only by the server that created them.

What type of "cookies" are we using on our site?

Session cookies - the kind of "cookies" that allow owners to track the movement of visitors to the site, eliminating the need to enter the same information that has already been transmitted on the page. Session cookies are deleted when the browser is closed.
Persistent cookies - store information on user's computer and save them on its hard drive. They remain there until they are deleted by the user.

How does our website use "cookies"?

We use "cookies" to distinguish people visiting our site. Thanks to them, we know for how long the visitors came to our site and how long they spent on each of the pages. "Cookies" are not used to process or store personal data or other confidential information.

How to get rid of "cookies"?

Each browser allows to delete cookies. Depending on which browser you are using - the process will be slightly different. More information can be found in the "Help" of each browser.
